STEP FIVE BOYS

Teenagers don't often say that they like jazz music. In fact, this type of music is more popular with people over 55. But Step Five Boys are different, their passion is jazz, and they are bringing it to a new generation. The band is made up of three teenage brothers from New Jersey, United States, a place which is known more for its rock music. So how did they start playing jazz?

It's a funny story. The Young boys discovered jazz a few years ago. They were on YouTube one day and saw an old music video of a famous jazz musician. "We said, Wow we've never heard anything like this", says Tommy. The boys listened to some more songs, started learning some traditional jazz music, and the band was born.

A short time later, they made a video themselves playing music at home and put it on YouTube. People were amazed to see such young boys playing jazz so well. The Step Five Boys' video went viral and millions of people watched it. Just two weeks later, the boys appeared on TV for the first time. The brothers are now starting to create their own kind of jazz music, writing their own songs and adding lyrics. Their idea is that making Music brings equal happiness to the musicians and the listeners.
